Many people in middle age and beyond are the worst and most serious offenders in the field of reducing. Nature intentionally, with most folks, adds weight with years. The layer of fat that becomes most noticeable over the stomach is furnished for additional warmth and protection to vital organs, and to compensate for the fact that with age the body generates less warmth. A little fat, at forty, is no sign of physical degeneration. —American Magazine.

Right up to the middle of the last century scientists spoke of the deep as an impenetrable world of gloom.

ARBITRARY DIVISION OF EUROPE AND ASIA. CAMBODIA. The conception that the great land mass of Eurasia consists of two separate divisions originated among the peoples of Assyria who dwelt east of the Mediterranean. It was natural that they should have recognized Europe and Asia as two continents because civilization. In both had grown up in those parts where they are separated by large bodies of water. The Assyrians called Greece "Eni" or "Irish" meaning west or small, and called Asia "An" from Asia Minor, which they called "Ass," significant of west or sunrise. "Irish" was changed by the westerners into "Europe" and "Asia" is derived from "Assen," and since those times were extended, the one from Greece to all Europe, the other from Asia Minor to all Asia. The Ural river, for the sake of convenience, is now regarded as the boundary between Asia and Europe, "continent," which is derived from Latin "continens," meaning to continue, has a very properly defined meaning when applied to a land mass. In a general sense it means a very large continuous body of land, differing from an island or peninsula not merely in size but also in structure. Several great land divisions are now recognized, namely, Europe, Asia, Africa, North America, North America, Australia and Antarctica. Greenland, being much smaller than the others, is frequently referred to as an island continent. Since Europe and Asia consist of a single land mass, many have been inclined to classify them as one continent.

This photograph of a painting shows what the Manhattan, largest merchant vessel ever built in the United States, will look like when it is completed. It was launched the other day at Camden, N. J., and will enter the transatlantic service of the United States lines next June. The Manhattan is of 30,000 gross registered tons, will carry about 1,000 passengers and will have a cruising speed of more than twenty knots. Capt. George Fried, hero of several ocean rescues, will be her commander.

You and I

LITTLE SHOES

Guide her feet among the flowers,
Little Shoes, I ask of you.
Lead her on to happy hours,
As the world she journeys through;
Guide her little baby feet
Into girlhood, pure and sweet.

When there's right and wrong to choose,
And there's danger stalking near,
Lead her safely, Little Shoes,
Into pathways clean and clear.
Little Shoes, I wish that I Might, as you, be always nigh.

Old and battered Little Shoes,
You've a task that's mighty sweet.
If one task were mine to choose,
Mine would be to guide her feet.
May my own steps lead her on
To Godly paths and halcyon.

Uncover "Main Street"

of Ancient Olynthus Main street, Olynthus, Greece, which has lain in ruins ever since 348 B. C., has been excavated by a Johns Hopkins university expedition, led by Dr.
David M. Robinson, professor of archaeology.

An entire city block, with 27 houses,
was uncovered by the expedition, and
the fine street running north was given the name "Main street."

"In the houses we found floors of beautiful pebble mosaics, in red, purple, blue and white," said Doctor Robinson, describing the discoveries.
These are the oldest mosaic floors
known. Some have famous myths beautifully pictured in the pebbles.
One floor shows Pellerophon and his ranged horse encircling the mythical beast, the Chimera, which had a lion's head, goat's middle and the tail
of a snake.

In a previous expedition of 1928,
in which the ruins of Olynthus were first found and identified, Doctor Robinson was unable to locate the center. This time he found two centers.

The houses that have been uncovered date from about 400 B. C., Doctor Robinson concludes. Olynthus
was a large city, having a population
of some 65,000, judging from its ruins.
It was destroyed suddenly and violently by Philip of Macedonia, the father of Alexander the Great, in 348 B. C.

Child of Earlier Days

Shielded From the Sun
George Washington no doubt would look with great astonishment at the system of raising children of this generation of Americans. He took a keen interest in the health and healthfulness of his stepchildren and stepgrandchildren, yet the sun baths
which are part of the daily regime of a well brought-up child of today,
whether of the family of the laborer
or the millionaire, would have caused the Father of His Country to blink his eyes, no doubt.

George Washington, who took a great interest in his little stepdaughter, ordered for "Miss Custis" all kinds of sun umbrellas, a supply of children's muslin in order to prevent her complexion from the rays of the sun. Miss Custis, wife of President
Washington, was the little Quaker girl,
Fanny Payne, had a faithful mother with enough of the world's vanity in her Quaker mind to see a sunburn on
the tiny girl's head every morning,
put long gloves on her arms and hands
and make her wear a mask to keep every ray of sunlight from her face.
How the mothers of today, with their modern ideas would be horrified, if asked to perform this daily beauty
rite for their young ones.—Washington Post.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Representative McFadden's Violent Attack on President Hoover Stirs House—Chicago Wins the Republican National Convention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TWO Republican members of congress from Pennsylvania—Representative Louis McFadden and Senator David A. Reed—stirred up the national legislature on the violent attacks on the policy of President Hoover and the administration in relation to the moratorium on intergovernmental debts and the suggested revival of the refunding commission with the possibility of cancellation of war debts.

McFadden, former chairman of the house banking and currency committee, especially after his long speech, asserting that Mr. Hoover had "sold out" the United States to the German international bankers whom he named as Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the Seligman, Paul Warburg and "their satellites." He said the administration's course in working for acceptance of the moratorium was like "the ways of an oriental potentate drunk with power." He declared the President's unethical policy of congress last June was "a crude attempt to usurp legislative power."

Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, a Tammany Democrat, joined in his first shouting to the Republicans.

"The President as well as his cabinet," he said, "are all traitors who are ready for the guillotine. The only drawback is the fact that the guillotine is located on the West side, several miles from the hotels that will house the visitors."

RELIEF for the nation's jobless is still foremost in the mind of Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York. Last week he introduced in the senate a resolution designed to set in motion the machinery created by the federal employment stabilization act which was passed last session at his instance. This would mean a start on a two billion-dollar federal public works program that would give employment to thousands of men.

In the preamble to his resolution, Senator Wagner set forth facts and figures showing the gravity of the depression. After citing the numbers of unemployed, the many bank failures and the falling off in production, he showed that the volume of construction for the third quarter of 1931 was $48,000,000 or 53 per cent less than for the third quarter of 1929, that the volume of building contracts awarded declined $2,447,500,000 in the first nine months of 1931 below the similar period in 1929; that the volume of construction of public works and public utilities has fallen from $1,000,000,000 in the first nine months of 1929 to $982,500,000; that the whole price of building materials declined from an index of 52.9 in January to 71.9 in September, that money spent for labor in the larger American cities was in September, 1931, 142 per cent greater than in September, 1929, and in October, 1931, 112 per cent greater than in October, 1929.

OVER in Basel, Switzerland, the Young plan advisory committee, of which Alfredo Beneluce of Italy is chairman, was said to have abandoned any intention of making strong recommendations for the complete abolition of reparations payments by Germany, though this was strongly urged by the central panel member, and favored by others. The committee's final report, though changed by the Beneluce plan, was said to be a compromise between the American attitude and the German position. The committee will now report to the various governments the facts gathered concerning Germany's capacity to pay, and action will be put up to the final negotiations between the United States and Germany in January.

A re-fuel subcommittee submitted a written report to Chairman Reed during the morning session of the senate on the holdings of foreigners in Germany with a view to establishing the net debt of the reich. The figures were held in secrecy.

It was understood this subcommittee suggested it was impossible to uncover all German investments abroad and indicated that they were much larger than the $700,000,000 relief money held in the Wigan report as of June 31, 1930.

SENATOR REED, who has often been regarded as the spokesman for Secretary Mellon, denounced what he called the propaganda by the international bankers to force cancellation for their own selfish interests and he declared that he was opposed to the revival of the war debt commission as proposed by the President.

"The time has come," he said, "when we are going to cancel it. It is within the power of most of the nations of Europe to pay the amounts that are due to us, but it is sheer impossibility for us to be any more generous than we have been in the past."

SENATOR McFADDEN and Senator Johnson of California followed in much the same vein and both declared they would not vote even for the one year moratorium. The latter was before the house ways and means committee and Finance Committee and Secretary of State Stimson both appeared before that body to urge cancellation.

SPEAKER GARNER and Senator McFadden, who had the floor, declared that the House moratorium was a "sell-out" to the international bankers. The speaker also declared that every patriotic citizen should be urged to the repeal of the moratorium. The committee also declared that every patriotic citizen should be urged to the repeal of the moratorium.

trans delivered their entire vote to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, a regular who was a leader of the so-called "young guard" last session, but both Vandenberg and the young guard spurned this overture and continued to vote for Mellon.

CHICAGO captured the Republican national convention of 1932, the administration's alleged opposition to that city not manifesting itself. The national committee, presided over by Chairman Fess, listened to earnest arguments of Chicago and Atlantic City, and on the first ballot gave 86 votes to the former and 14 to the latter. The choice was then made unanimous. Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia and St. Louis withdrew their bids before the balloting began, none of them having been able to raise the money for the convention expense. The committee decided that the convention should be held for the 14th of June.

Chicago guarantees up to $150,000 to pay for the expenses of the G. O. P. gathering, and her hotels have agreed to accommodate 3,500 delegates, alternates and newspaper men at rates of from $1.50 to $4 a day. The convention will be held in the new stadium, which can seat about 20,000 and which has ample accommodations for committees, etc. It has a cantilever roof without obstructive pillars, a symmetrical and well-proportioned system of excellent acoustics and a fine pipe organ. The only drawback is the fact that the stadium is located on the West side, several miles from the hotels that will house the visitors.

Being Constantly Amused

We have never had moving pictures or vaudeville houses open on Sunday in our town for more than a few days at least. Every few years the subject comes up for discussion and sometimes even a vote is taken, but so far the opposition has won out.

Those who favor the opening of the theaters on Sunday argue that there is nothing to do if they cannot see a vaudeville show or a moving picture. They are resourceless; they yawn or sleep through the day and are glad when Monday comes and they can take up their regular work again.

The thing that has interested me in observing the people who have made the loudest pleas for the Sunday theater is that they are the ones who have most opportunity if they choose to use it, for this sort of recreation during the week.

I was more than interested while reading excerpts from the autobiography of Mr. George Arliss to get a point of view very different from what one might expect from this great actor who has spent all his life on the stage and who must have a very favorable opinion of what the theater has to contribute toward the healthy amusement of the public.

"If I had my way," he says, "I would close all theaters and all movie houses on Sunday. I would make it a day apart. I would exclude all the ordinary amusements except outdoor sports. There is no reason why the day should be dull for anyone. There are always good books. There are hobbies to be pursued. I would have all the art galleries and museums wide open. I would have classical music and high-class concerts. . . . I do not suggest that this class of entertainment is necessarily better, but it is different, and it is likely to open up in one's mind fresh ideas. . . . An unbroken routine in our amusements may be as bad as a steady grind in our labors."

It is his last sentence which appeals to me.

One of the greatest long-distance flyers is the large Cabbage White butterfly, to be seen everywhere in summertime. These insects sometimes hatch out in millions upon islands in the Baltic and, finding food supplies insufficient, collect into great hordes and migrate to places all over Europe. They are sometimes seen passing over Germany in clouds so thick that they resemble snowstorms. The United Lady's real home is Central Africa. In some seasons, millions upon millions of these insects cross the Sahara desert, spend a short time on the shores of northern Africa, and then continue their journey northwards. Many reach the British Isles, and it is not uncommon for a fair number to arrive in Iceland.

now matter who is who—Though we fear you'll say "I've heard that one before!"
"MERRY CHRISTMAS!"

As cheery as the azure sky,
We caught it for our very own,
To broadcast through the microphone:
